Learning Agenda Working Session – Group Discussion Guide

Monday, February 23, 2016

The purpose of these small group discussions is to begin to being using a shared language when talking about empowerment and our learning objectives and to begin to draw connections across each other’s work and explore opportunities for shared learning and complementarities.

Discussion questions on the dimension of empowerment of women and girls:

1. What types of questions are you exploring about this dimension of empowerment?
2. Are there commonalities within the group?
3. What measurement approaches are you using and what type of evidence will be generated?
4. Which projects are generating similar types of evidence? Which projects are using different measurement approaches that may be complimentary?

Discussion questions on cross-cutting issues:

Prioritize one cross-cutting issue to begin the discussion: intersectionality, taking a life-cycle approach to empowerment, or engaging with men and boys. Use the discussion to draw out the commonalities, differences, and complimentary approaches.

1. Which projects address this cross-cutting issue?
2. How is the cross-cutting issue being addressed within the different projects?
3. What aspects of the cross-cutting issue are being measured and analyzed? How will the information from the analysis be used?
